Irish sales company Silver Mountain has acquired the international rights to Borja Alcalde's feature-length documentary The Sacred Family. The film will have its world premiere at the 75th Edinburgh International Film Festival (August 12-20).

The Spanish-language documentary follows a Peruvian family living in the Sacred Valley of the Incas who embark on a road trip through the Amazon rainforest and struggle with the ever-increasing lure of modern technology.

It is Alcalde's feature debut as a director and producer with British producer Adam Dawtre, whose credits include A Story of Children and Films , executive producer. Screen Scotland, BFI Doc Society and Wav Lab Studio co-financed the feature.

Silver Mountain is the commercial arm of Cork-based Carey Fitzgerald's Silver Mountain Productions.

"Borja Alcalde's poetic cinematography and imagery of Peru is breathtaking, and it's refreshing to see the story of a Shaman family focus on their dynamic as people like you and me," said Dominique Murphy-de Neef, creative director of Silver Mountain.

“ The Sagrada Família educates us about their culture while showing us that we all experience the same things in life. It also reminds us of the beauty of spending time with loved ones, the importance of connecting with nature, and how learning about your own people and culture can help you design the life you want to live.

The Sacred Family will be screened in the 'Heartbreakers' section of the Edinburgh Festival.
